Dear Diary:

Today was our school sports day. Many people came, including my parents and friends, to watch the soccer game. My classmates and I had practiced a lot because we wanted to be the champion.

The game started well, and we scored two goals. But in the second half, our best player broke his arm and had to leave. The other team scored twice, so the game went into overtime.

After no goals in overtime, we had a penalty shootout. We scored one more goal than the other team and won! However, we weren't happy because our player was hurt. After the game, we visited him at the hospital. I hope he could get better soon.

Many people keep some animals as pets. For example, cats, dogs, rabbits, and sea animals. Although these animals have eyes as humans do, some of them can't see certain colors. In other words, they are color-blind.

Dogs' cute faces and their loyalty make people love them. However, they can't see red, orange, and green. These colors always appear yellow or blue to them. For cats, they can see things in blue or green, but things in red appear in different colors to them.

Most sea animals can only see black and white. For example, sharks, whales, and dolphins. As the time goes by, they might lose their color vision because they live under the sea. There is one sea animal which can't see colors. The sea animals are skates. Can you imagine living in a world without any colors?
